

Viewpoints

Viewpoints are reflections on current issues and themes identified by the editorial team. The style here is more scholarly and formal than a blog post, but less rigorous than a regular journal article. The idea is to respond in a timely way to current issues using the methods and insights from the subdiscipline. Viewpoints on a particular theme may be published in different issues of the journal, but they will be compiled online, along with an editorial introduction, as a Virtual Forum.

Viewpoints accepted for publication will be made available online in pre-proof form to help facilitate discussion among potential contributors to the Virtual Forum. Individual Viewpoints are 1500- 2000 words in length, including references (endnotes and subheadings are discouraged). While not peer-reviewed, commentaries are reviewed by the Setting-the-Agenda editor and possibly other members of the editorial team. Questions and expressions of interest can be directed to the Setting-the-Agenda editor, Caroline Nagel: cnagel@mailbox.sc.edu